About

I'm a recent Computer Application graduate who has spent the last two years teaching myself full-stack development with a focus on the MERN stack. I enjoy solving problems and building things for the web, and during my studies, I also took on a role in website content management to get some professional experience. I've put my skills into practice by building several projects from the ground up, and I'm now looking for a full-stack role where I can contribute to a team and continue to grow as a developer.
